SINGAPORE CHRONICLES

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of Singapore’s Independence, the Institute of Policy Studies and Straits Times Press are jointly launching the Singapore Chronicles series in 2015. This 50-volume series seeks to record, explain and offer insights into what makes Singapore, Singapore. Covering a wide range of subjects, from the philosophical to the mundane, the fundamental to the practical, these Singapore Chronicles titles include Constitution, Presidency, Housing, Transport, Demography, CPF, Sports and Food. Each volume in this series will serve as a primer on the subject. Written by leading experts, they will focus on key aspects of the subject, providing analysis as well as an historical account. Readers will gain an insight into what makes Singapore tick and also why it has chosen certain “paths un-trodden”.

EDUCATION

Singapore has been hailed as a great success in educating its citizens. Now, an educated citizenry seeks to influence, if not change, the nature of the state, the state’s compact with its citizens, and the role that education must play in the future. Against that background, this book examines the impact of education in Singapore’s transformation by studying the social, political and economic contexts within which policy and practice are embedded. It examines the key imperatives and principles that drove policy formulation, the success and failures of policy implementation, and how the state, at various times, fashioned education to meet its imperatives.

Contents

Foreword
Introduction
1 Laying Strong Foundations (1945–1959)
3 Planning for Diversity (1978–1990)
4 Responding to Globalisation (1990–2004)
6 Towards a New Spring Source for Singapore Education
Further Reading
Index

The Author

Saravanan Gopinathan has had a distinguished career as a teacher and researcher in teacher education and in education policy. Among the many positions he has held in a four-decade career at the National Institute of Education, are Dean of Education, Head, Centre for Research in Pedagogy and Practice, and Associate Dean, Office of Education Research. His articles are an authoritative source for various aspects of education and have appeared in Comparative Education Review, Research in Education, and Globalisation, Societies and Education. Recent books include Education and the Nation State (Routledge) and Globalisation and the Singapore Curriculum (Springer). He is presently an Adjunct Professor at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, NUS and Senior Advisor, The Head Foundation, an Asia-centric education think tank.